CEDAR CANYON

The cedar, considered sacred by many Native American tribes, represents overall wellbeing and protection. Its bark and berries can be used for medicine and food, with wood used for building and carving. Cedar Canyon pays homage to the tree's legendary utility and strength with a pattern of supple bark strips and an enclosing, protective diamond. Artist and designer Ramona Sakiestewa (Hopi), known for her architectural work at the National Museum of the American Indian, created this design.

Ramona Sakiestewa (Hopi) is an internationally renowned artist and designer who grew up in the American Southwest. Her portfolio includes fine art tapestries, works on paper, and architectural design. Her works reside in public, private, corporate and museum collections in the United States and abroad, with numerous awards including the New Mexico Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts. "As artists, we have to be prepared to reinvent ourselves many times."

New! UNITY

The Lakota word for horse is Sunka Wakan, or Holy Dog. At sunrise, a horse gallops through a Lakota village of traditional tipis. A geometric Morning Star greets the dawn over each dwelling, announcing the coming of sunlight to the earth and the gift of a new day. The horse or Holy Dog stands for strength and unity, the central figure in a design that represents how Nature and Native people are one.

Chelysa Owens-Cyr (Fort Peck Assiniboiné & Dakota Sioux/Pasqua First Nations Cree) is an artist from Montana's Fort Peck Indian Reservation. As a College Fund scholar, she studies Business Administration at Fort Peck Community College. She is a self-taught contemporary ledger artist, beader, graphic designer and painter, influenced by her family and culture. "I work with many mediums to share my personal teachings, beliefs, stories and visions with the people."

Nike is committed to getting youth in Native American and Indigenous communities in North America moving so they can lead healthier, happier and more successful lives. CHIEF JOSEPH PATTERN | Designed early in the 1920s, the Chief Joseph design continues to be one of Pendleton's longest running and most popular blankets. It commemorates the heroism of one of the Northwest's greatest Nez Perce leaders, Chief Joseph.

A portion of the proceeds from the sales of this blanket support women's health in the Native American community through N.A.R.A. (Native American Rehabilitation Association).

ROCK POINT COLLECTION

Rock Point Arizona is part of the Diné/Navajo Nation that covers more than 17 million acres in the Southwest. Rugged red rock formations surround this community. On a plain background representing the desert floor, formations like Red Mesa, Two Sisters, North Arch, and Whale Rock, or Tsé Bina'ookaahí are symbolized by repeating groups of geometric forms. These patterns alternate with Los Ojos motifs, which are joined together with arrows that point to the past and the future.

New! LOST TRAIL

In September of 1805, the Lewis & Clark Corps of Discovery struggled to find a trail through the Bitterroot Mountains. Their travails gave name to Lost Trail Pass, crossing the Idaho/Montana border. Two peaked bands represent the Columbia River Basin drainages divided by Lost Trail: Bitterroot Clark-Fork to the north, and Salmon to the south. The middle band represents the Lost Trail National Wildlife Refuge, which provides crucial winter habitat to fish, fowl, and mammals large and small. Unnapped.

New! SMITH ROCK

The towering face of Smith Rock overlooks a bend in Oregon's Crooked River, challenging climbers from around the world to scale its heights. Considered by many to be the birthplace of American sport climbing, Smith Rock State Park offers several thousand climbs, many of them bolted, in its 650 acres of high peaks, deep river canyons, and hiking trails like Misery Ridge. This pattern, based on a traditional nine-element blanket, alternates the park's peaks with the many paths traveled by hikers and climbers. Unnapped.

New! DIAMOND PEAK

In central Oregon, Diamond Peak shows the marks of time. Rising to 8,748 feet, it was carved by glaciers into a range of mountainous subfeatures: Mount Yorlan, Lakeview Mountain, and dramatic cinder cones. This slumbering shield volcano has not erupted in 10,000 years, making it dormant, perhaps extinct. The pattern's peaks and valleys echo the landscape, part of the Pacific Crest Trail and ancestral territory of many Oregon tribes, including the Klamath, Modoc and Yahooskin peoples. Unnapped.

New! AGATE BEACH

Agate, a banded form of chalcedony, formed billions of years ago in volcanic pockets. In the cooler seasons of the year, storms and waves dislodge agates from gravel beds along the Oregon shoreline. Beachcombers and rock hounds search for stones that range in color from inky black, to vivid fire tones, to rare and valuable blues, to soft greys and misty pinks. In this pattern, striated stones emerge from a sandy background to glow softly under Oregon's gentle skies. Napped.

New! LOS LUNAS

Colorful bands of multi-directional arrows symbolize the routes of people who made petroglyphs—carvings on rock walls—to record their specific cultures and journeys through the area now known as Los Lunas. This small New Mexico town is neighbor to Laguna Pueblo, the Rio Grande Valley, and Hidden Mountain. The area's abundant petroglyphs include figures seen nowhere else in the Americas. The carvings on Pueblo land are protected and treasured as centuries-old messages from the past. Unnapped.

$ New! GATHER

Like the piñon tree, members of the Navajo Nation gather resources to survive an increasingly precarious water supply. Diné artist Emma Robbins has gathered symbols of endurance for this design; a sáanii (maternal grandmother) scarf crossed by traditional sash belts used in ceremonies and childbirth. At the center, a young woman's bracelet of silver is set with turquoise, a stone formed by rare rains flowing through arid layers of rock. A portion of blanket sales will support DigDeep's Navajo Water Project. Napped.

WARRIORS' CIRCLE OF HONOR

The National Native American Veterans Memorial, at Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian in Washington, DC, commemorates the service and sacrifice of Native American, Native Hawaiian, and Alaska Native Veterans—past, current, and future. Designed by Oklahoma Artist Harvey Pratt (Cheyenne & Arapaho), the memorial is a place of honor, recognition, reflection and healing for all Native veterans and their families.

In Mr. Pratt's "Warriors' Circle of Honor" blanket design (based on the memorial), the Sacred Fire burns at the center of bands of color representing Air, Fire, Water, and Earth. A border of stars and stripes has openings to allow spirits to enter. Four hands wearing feathers of bravery and triumph mark the cardinal directions. Oval shapes echo the museum's Grandfather Rocks. SERAPE

While the serape is now part of both Spanish and Native American textiles, it has roots in the Mexican weaving tradition. Most commonly, the serape is woven of fine yarns that allow it to be lighter in weight than other blankets, with unbalanced stripes of varying widths. Pendleton's version stays true to this classic and historic style, and can serve a multitude of purposes.

PRAIRIE RUSH HOUR

The bison, often referred to as the buffalo, is the largest land mammal in North America. Long ago, millions of these mighty buffalo roamed the plains, prairies, and river valleys, terraforming the Great Plains with their hoofprints. Today, wild buffalo roam in and around America's National Parks, where they are protected.

MISSION TRAILS - ACCESSORY TRADITIONS

With pristine lakes and 65 miles of trails, California's Mission Trails Park offers nature's respite from nearby San Diego. Elongated diamond shapes echo the low mountains and deep canyons of the park's 7,200 acres. These shapes are interspersed with a mirrored motif of five peaks to represent the Mission Trails Five Peak Challenge, a climbing event that attracted 15K hikers to the park's mountains: Cowles Mountain, Pyles Peak, Kiwaay Paay, South Fortuna, and North Fortuna.

SUMMIT PEAK - ACCESSORY TRADITIONS

Along the Continental Divide in Colorado rises Summit Peak, the monarch of the San Juan Range. Bands of bright yellow represent the golden waters of the Alamosa River flowing east from the mountain's north slope, where the headwaters of the Rio Grande begin their long journey to the Gulf of Mexico. The blue waters of the Conejos River alternate with rows of wildflowers that cover the south slopes of Summit Peak each summer.

TECOPA HILLS

The Tecopa Hills are an arid, rolling mountain range in the Mojave Desert. Gentle, sinuous lines symbolize the river's path moving deep under the striated rock layers of the hills. These striations, eroded by sun, wind, and time, tell stories of ancient volcanic eruptions in layers of ash falls from as far away as the Yellowstone Caldera.

LOS LUNAS CANOPY CANVAS COLLECTION

Colorful bands of multi-directional arrows symbolize the routes of Indigenous people who made petroglyphs—carvings on rock walls—to record their specific cultures and journeys through the area now known as Los Lunas. This small New Mexico town is neighbor to Laguna Pueblo, the Rio Grande Valley, and Hidden Mountain. The area's abundant petroglyphs include figures seen nowhere else in the Americas. The carvings on Pueblo land are protected and treasured as centuries-old messages from the past.

For poolside, travel, and all-weather adventures, Canopy Canvas has you covered.

Imported, 100% Cotton Canvas with a matte PVC coating for easy cleaning, 100% Polyester lining, spot clean, available 4/25/22

SMITH ROCK EXPLORER COLLECTION

The towering face of Smith Rock overlooks a bend in Oregon's Crooked River, challenging climbers from around the world to scale its heights. Considered by many to be the birthplace of American sport climbing, Smith Rock State Park offers several thousand climbs, many of them bolted, in its 650 acres of high peaks, deep river canyons, and hiking trails like Misery Ridge. This pattern, based on a traditional nine-element blanket, alternates the park peaks with the many paths traveled by hikers and climbers.

Imported, 100% Polyester, spot clean, random horizontal pattern placement, available 6/25/22

STYLES WITH HERITAGE

These special garments derive inspiration from the Pendleton archives in pattern, style, and design. From our earliest women's "sporting coats" to sweaters worn by today's influencers and celebrities, these pieces embody classic American style.

HARDING

A pattern through time — commissioned by local tribes as a tribute to First Lady Florence Harding, this pattern has been in the Pendleton blanket line continuously since the 1920s.

FEATURED ARTISTS

Each year, Pendleton is proud to work with some of the finest artists to bring you new, inspired designs. Each artist brings their experience and point of view to the design, which is then woven on the Jacquard looms in our Pendleton, Oregon, mill. These gifted artists expand the tradition which began when the first blankets rolled off the looms in 1909.

New! EMMA ROBBINS

Gather

Emma Robbins (Diné) is an artist, community organizer, and Executive Director of the Navajo Water Project, part of the human rights nonprofit DigDeep Water. She completed her BFA at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and studied Modern and Contemporary Latin American Art History in Buenos Aires, Argentina. She is also an Aspen Institute Healthy Communities Fellow. Through her artwork, Robbins strives to raise awareness of Native issues through art that uses found materials gathered on her trips across the United States and abroad.

New! CHELYSA OWENS-CYR

American Indian College Fund - Unity

Chelysa Owens-Cyr (Fort Peck Assiniboine & Dakota Sioux/Pasqua First Nations Cree) is an artist from Montana's Fort Peck Indian Reservation. As a College Fund scholar, she studies Business Administration at Fort Peck Community College. She is a self-taught contemporary ledger artist, beader, graphic designer and painter, influenced by her family and culture. "I work with many mediums to share my personal teachings, beliefs, stories and visions with the people."

DESHAWNA ANDERSON

American Indian College Fund - Courage to Bloom

Photo by:
Justin Stewart

Deshawna Anderson (White Mountain Apache/Crow) attends Little Big Horn College in Crow Agency, Montana, where she studies Business Administration. She is of the Butterfly Clan and is a child of the Greasy Mouth. As a visual learner, she became interested in art as a tool to educate the viewer on the perspective of its creator. Influenced by Apache and Crow culture from the Crazy Mountains to Salt River Canyon, she also draws inspiration from historic and contemporary burden baskets, beadwork, quillwork, and attire.

TRACIE JACKSON

American Indian College Fund - Nike N7 - 7 Generations

Tracie Jackson is a Diné artist and designer from Star Mountain in the Navajo Nation. She is a fourth generation artisan. Her family encouraged her to study the traditional art forms of her tribe, and with their support she became a painter, jeweler, beader, and graphic designer. She studied design at the University of Oregon and currently works in Portland, Oregon, designing for the Nike N7 program, her dream job since age 14. "I was taught to get an education and use it to help our Native community, which pushed me to become a designer for N7."

PRESTON SINGLETARY

American Indian College Fund - Raven and the Box of Knowledge

Preston Singletary is an internationally known glass artist who grew up in the Pacific Northwest. His great-grandparents were full-blooded Tlingit Indians. His works explore traditional images and legends of his Tlingit heritage, translated into glass. His artworks are included in museum collections from the National Museum of the American Indian in Washington, DC to the Handelsbanken in Stockholm, Sweden.

New! RAMONA SAKIESTEWA

Legendary Collection - Cedar Canyon

Ramona Sakiestewa (Hopi) is an internationally renowned artist and designer who grew up in the American Southwest. Her portfolio includes fine art tapestries, works on paper, and architectural design. Her works reside in public, private, corporate and museum collections in the United States and abroad, with numerous awards including the New Mexico Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts. "As artists, we have to be prepared to reinvent ourselves many times."

COMMUNITY AND CONNECTION

Pendleton is part of a connected community that only grows stronger through education, preservation, wellness, and care for America's heroes. We are proud to give back through donations, contributions and philanthropic partnerships.

Notice: Pendleton Woolen Mills complies with the Indian Arts and Crafts Act | The Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-644), as amended, is a truth-in-marketing law that prohibits the offer or display for sale, or sale, of any art or craft product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a particular Indian Tribe. Covering all traditional and contemporary American Indian and Indian-style art and craftwork produced after 1935, the Act carries both criminal and civil penalties. For more information on the Act, please visit <https://www.doi.gov/iacb>

SUSANA SANTOS

Legendary Collection - Rodeo Sisters

Apolonia Susana Santos (1954-2006) was a painter, serigrapher, sculptor, writer and activist of Tygh and Yakama ancestry. Her use of rich colors, textures and natural materials created dynamic landscapes with a deep narrative that illuminates historic and contemporary Indigenous life and memory. Susana's artistic prowess and fearless activism were inextricable. She brought a unique, authentic vision to everything she created. Through her writings, public speaking, theater-style marches and art shows, Susana encouraged Native youth and children to always "Remember Who You Are."

JOE TOLEDO

Legendary Collection - In Their Element

Joe Toledo is a native of Jemez Pueblo in New Mexico who currently lives in Tiffany, Colorado. He enjoys working in watercolor because it is "spontaneous and unpredictable." Mr. Toledo mixes soft rainwater with his colors to reflect images from his Jemez Pueblo culture. His works are exhibited in collections in the United States, Canada and Europe.

JIM YELLOWHAWK

Legendary Collection - Buffalo Nation

Jim Yellowhawk grew up on the Cheyenne River Reservation in South Dakota. He is an enrolled member of the Itazipco Band of the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe, with Onodoga/Iroquois heritage through his mother. He graduated from Marion College, Indiana, and also studied at Columbus, Ohio School of Art and Design. He divides his time between the Black Hills of South Dakota and Golden Bay, New Zealand. His work encompasses many different media, including dance. "Traditional spirituality is woven into my daily life, work, practices and way of being."

HARVEY PRATT

Warriors' Circle of Honor

Harvey Pratt (Cheyenne/Arapaho) is an Oklahoma artist who works in painting, sculpting, wood carving, bronze, and graphic design. He served with the 3rd Reconnaissance Battalion in Vietnam. He has worked in law enforcement for fifty years and is one of the foremost forensic artists in America. He currently serves as the chairperson of the Interior Indian Arts and Crafts Board, and as a traditional Southern Cheyenne Peace Chief. For more information on his work, please visit harveypratt.com.

JUDD THOMPSON

Artist Collection - A Horse Called Paint

Judd Thompson was born in 1983 and grew up surrounded by art in his family's business, The Custer Battlefield Trading Post. After graduating from the University of Wyoming with a degree in Art & Art History, he moved to Billings, Montana, where he uses his passion for color theory to capture the essence of Crow Country in a variety of media, including painting and sculpture.

New! LOGAN MAXWELL HAGEGE

Artist Collection - Resting Place

Logan Maxwell Hagege is a Los Angeles based contemporary artist whose modern visions of the American West use signature clouds and repeating shapes to echo flora and figures in the foreground, creating a visual narrative for each composition. His use of natural light and color distills shapes to their essence, while celebrating their complexity.
