Solstice Canyon Pattern
California's Rising Sun Trailhead offers spectacular views of Solstice Canyon, home to many weathered formations in the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area. The largest urban national park in the United States offers 500 miles of hiking trails. Colorful bands represent powerful creeks that have carved canyons among the famed peaks: Sugarloaf, Lady Face, and Saddle Peak. Bands of chaparral cover the mountains, and triangular shapes represent local and imported trees, alive with wild parrots.

Blue Tan Ombre

Nehalem Pattern

Nehalem ("place where people live") is the name of a town, a river, a bay, and a park on Oregon's Pacific coast. Large ovals show the ebbing and rising tides of Nehalem Bay, where crabbing, fishing and clamming are popular pastimes. Triangular tree shapes represent the forested bike and equestrian trails throughout the Nehalem State Park. Legends of Spanish treasure buried on nearby Neahkahnie Mountain inspire the repeated "X" in the pattern's horizontal bands.

Four Corners Pattern

Located on the Colorado Plateau in the dry and windswept countryside of the Navajo Nation, a bronze disk marks Four Corners, the only point in the United State shared by four states. The repeated intersections in this traditional nine element pattern represent the coming together of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah. As early as 1908, travelers have visited the Four Corners region, which also marks the boundary the Navajo Nation and the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe Reservation.
