INFINITE PRAYER

Designer Jenabah Yazzie (Diné, Navajo Nation) feels the presence of the Holy People most in the earliest hours before sunrise. She portrays this special time for prayer in an ombre of dark hues. A border of triangles represents the never-ending love and protection of the Holy People. In the center, the Star People shine day and night. Horizontal lines represent infinite prayers. This winner of the Tribal College student design competition conveys the power of prayer with simplicity, balance, and grace.

Jenabah Yazzie (Dine) is from Lok'aa' (Reed Springs), just north of Teesto, Arizona on the Navajo Nation. A winner of the Tribal Student Design competition, she is studying psychology at Dine College. "Infinite Prayer" is one of her paintings. She is artistically inspired by teachings and songs passed down from her family. Her late father's artistic abilities led Jenabah to drawing and painting. She believes that art and culture go hand in hand. "Art is an extension of thoughts, emotions and energy that you make visible for others...a medicine that helps both mentally and spiritually."

FIRST NATIONS DEVELOPMENT INSTITUTE

The First Nations Development Institute invests in Native communities. To stem the loss of Indigenous languages and cultures, First Nations launched the Native Language Immersion Initiative in 2017 to support new generations of Native American language speakers, and help Native communities establish infrastructure and models for Native language immersion programs that may be replicated throughout Indian Country.

THE NORTHWEST

(NNACOE)

The Northwest Native American Center of Excellence (NNACoE) at Oregon Health & Science University (OHSU) works to address the health care needs of all people by increasing the number of American Indians and Alaska Natives (AI/ANs) in the health professions workforce. Pendleton will support the Northwest Native American Center of Excellence by generating donations through sales of all merchandise that uses the Chief Joseph design.

A portion of the proceeds from the sales of all Rosewood blankets supports women's health in the Native American community through N.A.R.A. (Native American Rehabilitation Association).

NEHALEM COLLECTION

Nehalem ("place where people live") is the name of a town, a river, a bay, and a park on Oregon's Pacific coast. Large ovals show the ebbing and rising tides of Nehalem Bay, where crabbing, fishing and clamming are popular pastimes. Triangular tree shapes represent the forested bike and equestrian trails throughout the Nehalem State Park. Legends of Spanish treasure buried on nearby Neahkahnie Mountain inspire the repeated "X" in the pattern's horizontal bands.

SARATOGA

Artist Jess Mudgett's bold design captures the spirit of Saratoga, Wyoming, where swallows fly above the waters of the North Platte River. This small town is the heart of a wilderness where wild horses roam miles of open land. Sagebrush, wildflowers, and hardy grasses stabilize the shifting sands of the nearby high desert. The artist first came here at a young age with his father to watch wild horses in the badlands. Ever since, the wild beauty surrounding Saratoga has been a wellspring of inspiration.

SEVEN SPRINGS

The craft of overshot weaving came to America with Scottish immigrants, who migrated to milder climates in the south, like the tiny town of Seven Springs, North Carolina. A squared pattern pays tribute to the intricate patterns of traditional coverlets, hand-loomed on a white warp in the four-harness overshot method. Weavers grew their own flax and cotton, and raised sheep for wool which was hand-carded, spun, and colored with natural dyes. Today, their Appalachian artistry is preserved in museums. A peaked medallion represents Tumalo Mountain, a peak in the High Cascades. Hikers who reach the top of this shield volcano find stunning views of three more volcanic beauties: Three Sisters, Broken Top, and Mount Bachelor. Smaller lines and ridges represent Tumalo State Park near Bend, Oregon. This favorite recreation area on the banks of the Deschutes River is home to Tumalo Falls, which plunges 97 feet from a weathered basalt ridge. Unnapped, Felt Bound.

CASCADIA

Fields of wildflowers are banded by peaks that represent the mountains of the Cascade Volcanic Arc. Also known as Cascadia, this range stretches from Lassen Peak in California, to the Silverthrone Caldera in British Columbia, Canada. The towering snow-capped peaks include Mount Hood and Mount Rainier in the Pacific Northwest. The center band represents the floral bounty that blooms in the rich volcanic soil near these dormant volcanoes: coreopsis, marigolds, poppies, and so many more. Unnapped.

GLACIER PEAKS

A still lake reflects an ice-topped mountain and the skies above it in soft ombre tones, while an eagle soars overhead. Glacier National Park sits at the border of the United States and Canada, in Montana. It is home to 26 named glaciers, marvels of compressed ice that form in and around mountainous granite peaks. Glacier was the first park celebrated with a Pendleton blanket in the early 1900s. Border stripes echo the simple stripes of earlier blankets. Napped, Felt Bound.

MYSTIC LAKE

High in Montana's Beartooth Mountains lies Mystic Lake, the second-deepest lake in the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness. High peaks surround the lake and cast their reflections in its still, cold surface. A pattern of triangular shapes represents this dramatic landscape, alternating with a solid neutral ground representing the lake's sandy beach. The icy waters support a fish hatchery; thus colorful groups of narrow shapes represent rainbow trout darting through the pristine beauty of Mystic Lake. Unnapped.

New! SERAPE STANDARD 100

While the serape is now part of both Spanish and Native American textiles, it has roots in the Mexican weaving tradition. Most commonly, the serape is woven of fine yarns that allow it to be lighter in weight than other blankets, with unbalanced stripes of varying widths. Pendleton's version stays true to this classic and historic style, and can serve a multitude of purposes.

SEVEN SPRINGS

The craft of overshot weaving came to America with Scottish immigrants, who migrated to milder climes in the south, like the tiny town of Seven Springs, North Carolina. A squared pattern pays tribute to the intricate patterns of traditional coverlets, hand-loomed on a white warp in the four-harness overshot method. Weavers grew their own flax and cotton, and raised sheep for wool which was hand-carded, spun, and colored with natural dyes. Today, their Appalachian artistry is preserved in museums. 57011 Agate Beach

AGATE BEACH

Agate, a banded form of chalcedony, formed billions of years ago in volcanic pockets. In the cooler seasons of the year, storms and waves dislodge agates from gravel beds along the Oregon shoreline. Beachcombers and rock hounds search for stones that range in color from inky black, to vivid fire tones, to rare and valuable blues, to soft greys and misty pinks. In this pattern, striated stones emerge from a sandy background to glow softly under Oregon's gentle skies. Napped, whipstitch binding.

TUMALO RIDGE

A peaked medallion represents Tumalo Mountain, a peak in the High Cascades. Hikers who reach the top of this shield volcano find stunning views of three more volcanic beauties: Three Sisters, Broken Top, and Mount Bachelor. Smaller lines and ridges represent Tumalo State Park near Bend, Oregon. This favorite recreation area on the banks of the Deschutes River is home to Tumalo Falls, which plunges 97 feet from a weathered basalt ridge. Unnapped, Felt Bound.

WYETH TRAIL

In 1834, stories of the Western frontier drew a Massachusetts inventor named Nathaniel Wyeth to the Oregon territories. The Wyeth Trail did not lead its namesake to fame and fortune, but his path endured to become part of the Oregon Trail's 2,170 miles. With a balanced pattern of peaks, this pattern shows a perilous trail passing through dry plains, fertile valleys, and pristine rivers, surrounded on both sides by the beautiful mountain ranges of Oregon. Unnapped, suede binding.

SUMMERLAND

The Summerland trail is in Mount Rainier National Park, voted "Best Wildflower Spot in the USA." Forested switchbacks give way to views of Little Tahoma and colorful tarns. Shimmering bands of color represent the wildflowers blanketing the hillsides in late summer—saxifrage, asters, mountain daisies, and so many more. A footbridge crosses Fryingpan Creek, where Green Darner dragonflies flit above the water on iridescent wings that are as colorful as the blooming wildflowers. Unnapped, whipstitch binding.

LOST TRAIL

In September of 1805, the Lewis & Clark Corps of Discovery struggled to find a trail through the Bitterroot Mountains. Their travails gave name to Lost Trail Pass, crossing the Idaho/Montana border. Two peaked bands represent the Columbia River Basin drainages divided by Lost Trail: Bitterroot Clark-Fork to the north, and Salmon to the south. The middle band represents the Lost Trail National Wildlife Refuge, which provides crucial winter habitat to fish, fowl, and mammals large and small.

DESERT DREAM

The hawk floats on the cool currents of the starry night sky. The snake slithers, a silent traveler across the sand through a forest of spiny cacti. A bold young mustang raises dust, galloping down from distant hills, as fast as the night wind. Are these creatures awake, or are they dreaming? The desert holds the dreams of all living things that move through it, whether they travel on wing, scale, or hoof.

FEATURED ARTISTS

Each year, Pendleton is proud to work with some of the finest artists to bring you new, inspired designs. Each artist brings their experience and point of view to the design, which is then woven on the Jacquard looms in our Pendleton, Oregon, mill. These gifted artists expand the tradition which began when the first blankets rolled off the looms in 1909.

New! JENABAH YAZZIE

American Indian College Fund - Infinite Prayer

Jenabah Yazzie (Dine) is from Lok'aa' (Reed Springs), just north of Teesto, Arizona on the Navajo Nation. A winner of the Tribal Student Design competition, she is studying psychology at Dine College. "Infinite Prayer" is one of her paintings. She is artistically inspired by teachings and songs passed down from her family. Her late father's artistic abilities led Jenabah to drawing and painting. She believes that art and culture go hand in hand. "Art is an extension of thoughts, emotions and energy that you make visible for others...a medicine that helps both mentally and spiritually."

TREY BLACKHAWK

American Indian College Fund - Drum Keepers

Designer Trey Blackhawk (Winnebago) is a graduate of Nebraska's Little Priest Tribal College with a degree in Liberal Arts, returning to school as an Applied Sciences major. He is influenced by the artwork he's seen at powwows, drumming and singing, and the beading, sewing and dancing of his family. Blackhawk is first and foremost a farmer. "My studies have given me a broad overview of many things, specifically to heal the land we reside on while growing food and caring for animals."

TROY TSO

American Indian College Fund - Directions Home

Troy Tso is a Diné (Navajo) artist raised in the community of Burntcorn Valley, Arizona. His clans are Coyote Pass-Jemez (Mą'íideeshgíízhinií), Red Running into Water people (Táchii'nii), Tangle (Ta'neeshahni), and Mexican (Naakai dine'e). Tso is inspired by family and influenced by Diné culture. He began drawing at a young age, and has progressed from sketching to graphic art and design with ideas that come from living each day as Diné. "Art has the responsibility to heal and inspire."

CYDNEE SHANGREAU

American Indian College Fund - Morning Storm

Cydnee Shangreaux (Oglala Sioux) is a beadwork artist who was inspired to preserve her family's bead patterns by the passing of several older relatives. "Morning Storm" was created by her great-great-great-grandmother, Selena Marshall, for her own moccasins and leggings. These were passed down through the maternal line until they reached Cydnee. Cydnee is a resident of Pine Ridge, South Dakota, and student at Oglala Lakota College studying Office Technology. "As the first grandchild to be interested in these family patterns, I use my art to tell stories of my life, family, and the places I enjoy."

DUSTIN LOPEZ

American Indian College Fund - Many Nations

Dustin Lopez (Diné/Laguna Pueblo/Pascua Yaqui) is based in Phoenix, Arizona. He is currently working as a designer, muralist, and educator, and attends Diné College, majoring in Fine Arts with an emphasis in Design. With a passion for creativity, Lopez aspires to be a role model on and off the reservation. "My dream is to use art and design as a driving force to reclaim our language, culture, and identities as 'mixtbloods'. By combining modern and street art with contemporary art, I hope to inspire successfully between both worlds."

LEANDRA YAZZIE

The Healing Blanket

Artist and designer Leandra Yazzie (Diné) lives in Blue Gap, Arizona. Growing up, her grandmother and aunt, both renowned Navajo weavers, shared their talents, techniques, and histories with her. Ms. Yazzie credits the resilient woman in her life with inspiring the vibrant cultural undertones that inform her work.

EMMA ROBBINS

Gather

Emma Robbins (Diné) is an artist, community organizer, and Executive Director of the Navajo Water Project, part of the human rights nonprofit DigDeep Water. She completed her BFA at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and studied Modern and Contemporary Latin American Art History in Buenos Aires, Argentina. She is also an Aspen Institute Healthy Communities Fellow. Through her artwork, Robbins strives to raise awareness of Native issues through art that uses found materials gathered on her trips across the United States and abroad.

CHELISA OWENS-CYR

American Indian College Fund - Unity

Chelysa Owens-Cyr (Fort Peck Assiniboiné & Dakota Sioux/Pasqua First Nations Cree) is an artist from Montana's Fort Peck Indian Reservation. As a College Fund scholar, she studied Business Administration at Fort Peck Community College. She is a self-taught contemporary ledger artist, beader, graphic designer and painter, influenced by her family and culture. "I work with many mediums to share my personal teachings, beliefs, stories and visions with the people."

DESHAWNA ANDERSON

American Indian College Fund - Courage to Bloom

Deshawna Anderson (White Mountain Apache/Crow) attended Little Big Horn College in Crow Agency, Montana, where she studied Business Administration. She is of the Butterfly Clan and is a child of the Greasy Mouth. As a visual learner, she became interested in art as a tool to educate the viewer on the perspective of its creator. Influenced by Apache and Crow culture from the Crazy Mountains to Salt River Canyon, she also draws inspiration from historic and contemporary burden baskets, beadwork, quillwork, and attire.

TRACIE JACKSON

American Indian College Fund - Nike N7 - 7 Generations

Tracie Jackson is a Diné artist and designer from Star Mountain in the Navajo Nation. She is a fourth generation artisan and studied the traditional art forms of her tribe to become a painter, jeweler, beader, and graphic designer. After graduating from the University of Oregon, she designed for the Nike N7 program, and started her own design company, Rezilient Soles. She is currently a footwear designer for Manitobah. "Rooted in community and culture, we are working towards making a more sustainable future."

PRESTON SINGLETARY
American Indian College Fund -
Raven and the Box of Knowledge

Preston Singletary is an internationally known glass artist who grew up in the Pacific Northwest. His great-grandparents were full-blooded Tlingit Indians. His works explore traditional images and legends of his Tlingit heritage, translated into glass. His artworks are included in museum collections from the National Museum of the American Indian in Washington, DC to the Handelsbanken in Stockholm, Sweden. youth and children to always "Remember Who You Are."

JOE TOLEDO
Legendary Collection - In their Element

Joe Toledo is a native of Jemez Pueblo in New Mexico who currently lives in Tiffany, Colorado. He enjoys working in watercolor because it is "spontaneous and unpredictable." Mr. Toledo mixes soft rainwater with his colors to reflect images from his Jemez Pueblo culture. His works are exhibited in collections in the United States, Canada and Europe.

JUDD THOMPSON
Artist Collection - A Horse Called Paint

Judd Thompson was born in 1983 and grew up surrounded by art in his family's business, The Custer Battlefield Trading Post. After graduating from the University of Wyoming with a degree in Art & Art History, he moved to Billings, Montana, where he uses his passion for color theory to capture the essence of Crow Country in a variety of media, including painting and sculpture.

LOGAN MAXWELL HAGEGE
Artist Collection - Resting Place

Logan Maxwell Hagege is a Los Angeles based contemporary artist whose modern visions of the American West use signature clouds and repeating shapes to echo flora and figures in the foreground, creating a visual narrative for each composition. His use of natural light and color distills shapes to their essence, while celebrating their complexity.

JESS MUDGETT
Artist Collection - Saratoga

Jess Mudgett is an artist and part-time nomad based in White Salmon, Washington. His distinctive artwork captures beauty of the American West in a signature style with bold lines and framed panels. Jess was raised in Fort Collins, Colorado, and graduated with a Bachelor's of Fine Arts in Portland, Oregon. He travels the country in his F-350 painting, working, meeting inspiring people and chasing meaningful times while creating art for a diverse range of clients. "The high mountain sagebrush country, the life it contains, and the world that surrounds it continue to inspire me."

Notice: Pendleton Woolen Mills complies with the Indian Arts and Crafts Act | The Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-644), as amended, is a truth-in-marketing law that prohibits the offer or display for sale, or sale, of any art or craft product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a particular Indian Tribe. Covering all traditional and contemporary American Indian and Indian-style art and craftwork produced after 1935, the Act carries both criminal and civil penalties.
